Case No. 4:20-cv-05883-JSW

DECLARATION OF MANUEL PASTOR
JR. IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS'
MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

1 I, Manuel Pastor, Jr., hereby submit this declaration pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746 and declare 2 as follows:

3 1. I am a Distinguished Professor at the University of Southern California and am the 4 Director of the USC Equity Research Center, a merger between the Center for the Study of 5 Immigrant Integration (“CSII”) and the Program for Environmental and Regional Equity, both of 6 which I have directed over the last twelve years.

7 2. I have a Ph.D. in Economics from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Before 8 attaining my Ph.D., I completed a bachelor’s degree in economics at the University of California, 9 Santa Cruz, and a master’s degree in economics at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

10 3. I have received fellowships from the Danforth, Guggenheim and Kellogg
11 foundations, and grants from the Irvine Foundation, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Ford 12 Foundation, the National Science Foundation, the Hewlett Foundation, the MacArthur Foundation, 13 and many others.

14 4. My research has generally focused on issues of the economic, environmental, and 15 social conditions facing low-income urban communities and the social movements seeking to change 16 those realities.

17 5. I am widely published and a frequent speaker on issues of demographic change, 18 economic inequality, and community empowerment.

19 6. A true and correct copy of my curriculum vitae is attached as Appendix A.

20 7. I have personal and professional knowledge of the matters set forth herein. I would 21 testify to the facts in this declaration under oath if called upon to do so.

22 8. I have extensively researched the effect of fees on naturalization. Some of that 23 research and my conclusions are detailed in Nurturing Naturalization: Could Lowering the Fee
24 Help?, which was published in February 2013.

25 9. I have also studied the impact of naturalization and equity on the economy. Some of 26 my research and conclusions are detailed in a book I edited with John Mollenkopf titled Unsettled 27 Americans: Metropolitan Context and Civic Leadership for Immigrant Integration which was 28 published in 2016, in a book I wrote with Chris Benner titled Equity, Growth, and Community: What

1 the Nation Can Learn From America's Metro Areas, which was published in 2015, and in a report I 2 co-authored, titled Citizen Gain: The Economic Benefit of Naturalization for Immigrants and the 3 Economy, which was published in December 2012.

4 10. The Department of Homeland Security ("DHS") published a final rule, U.S.
5 Citizenship and Immigration Services Fee Schedule and Changes to Certain Other Benefit Request
6 Requirements, on August 3, 2020 (the "Final Rule").

7 11. My work was cited in at least 38 comments to the Final Rule.

8 12. I was asked to provide my expert opinion about the economic assumptions and 9 justifications on which the fee increases in the Final Rule are based and the likely effects of the Final 10 Rule.

11 13. In summary, it is my expert opinion that the Final Rule relies on inaccurate economic 12 assumptions. The Final Rule will reduce the rate of naturalization, and that reduction will 13 disproportionately affect immigrants with lower incomes and immigrants from Mexico. The Final 14 Rule will increase inequity, which will have a negative impact on the nation's economy.

15 14. Among other changes, the Final Rule raises the price for the N-400 Application for 16 Naturalization from $640 to $1,170, with a $10 discount for applicants who file online. For 17 applicants who file by paper, this represents an 83% increase in the fee. 85 Fed. Reg. 46792. At the 18 same time, the Final Rule reduces the price for the I-90 Application to Replace Permanent Resident 19 Card from $455 to $415, with a $10 discount for applicants who file online. For applicants who file 20 by paper, this represents a 9% decrease in the fee.

21 15. In addition, prior research has indicated that applicants may need to put time and 22 money into English and civics courses, as well as into obtaining any needed legal or other assistance 23 in preparing the paperwork to naturalize, further increasing the cost of applying.

24 16. With respect to the naturalization fees, the Final Rule states, "DHS does not have any 25 data to establish that these fees, though required, are a significant impediment to naturalization or 26 economic and social mobility. DHS saw no or limited decreases in the number of benefit requests 27 submitted after its fee adjustments in 2007, 2010, and 2016 (e.g. N-400 filing volumes grew from 28

1 less than 600,000 in FY 2009 to approximately 750,000 in FY 2011; similarly, N-400 filing volumes
2 grew from less than 800,000 in FY 2015 to nearly 1 million in FY 2017).” 85 Fed. Reg. 46798.

3 17. DHS’s economic assumption is contradicted by research. Analysis of data indicates 4 that fee increases can have a negative impact on the volume of naturalization. In particular, our 5 research analyzed data on N-400 applications for the years 1998-2009. The data showed that the FY 6 1999 fee increases resulted in a precipitous drop in N-400 applications. The FY 2004 fee increase, 7 which was implemented mid-fiscal year and was a relatively modest increase in the citizenship fee,
8 brought a modest surge in N-400 applications of about 27 percent (perhaps reflecting individuals 9 trying to apply before the increase) and then a slight decrease afterward. The FY 2007 fee increase, 10 which was implemented in July, resulted in a big surge of N-400 applications in the first part of the 11 year (prior to the increase), followed by a dramatic decline in the latter part of that year and into 12 2008.

13 18. Research also demonstrates economic and social benefits of naturalization, and that 14 fees are an impediment to accessing the benefits that accrue with naturalization. For example, my 15 own econometric study coupling data on income with information on the year of naturalization 16 found that citizen immigrants realized an eight to 11 percent increase in individual earnings over the 17 course of several years after naturalization. My own research also shows that the price increases for 18 naturalization in 2004 and 2007 were a significant barrier to citizenship for less educated and lower 19 income immigrants.

20 19. Based on data from past fee increases, postponing the effective date of the fee 21 increase for naturalization applications in the Final Rule will likely increase revenue for USCIS in 22 the immediate term. However, actually implementing the Final Rule could result in reduction in 23 revenue over time.

24 20. With respect to the I-90 and N-400 fees, the Final Rule states, “In setting these fees, 25 DHS intends to achieve full cost recovery for USCIS, as provided by law, while emphasizing the 26 beneficiary-pays principle of user fees. DHS is not motivated by another consideration in 27 establishing these fees, thus, we did not consider any interplay between the fees for Forms I-90 and 28 N-400 in the NPRM, nor do we in the final rule.” 85 Fed. Reg. 46838.

21. Failing to account for the interplay between the fees for Forms I-90 and N-400 undermines the modeling on which the Final Rule is based. Data demonstrates that naturalization seems to be responsive to price, particularly to the differential between renewing permanent resident status and obtaining citizenship. Raising the cost of naturalization and lowering the cost of renewing legal resident status will have the effect of reducing the rate of naturalization applications. Any revenue assumptions thus must take into account the interplay between these applications.

22. The Final Rule also states, “Therefore, DHS believes the price elasticity for immigration services is inelastic and increases in price will have no impact on the demand for these services. This is true for all immigration services impacted by this rule.” 85 Fed. Reg. 46896. This is the wrong metric since immigrants are likely to require some sort of immigrant services; the real issue is which they choose when prices shift. Analysis of data shows a responsiveness to price shifts, particularly to the difference between the cost to renew a green card and the cost of naturalization. The relative cost of those applications is the relevant comparison for any immigrant and should have been taken into account in any economic modeling supporting the Final Rule.

23. Evidence supports the importance of the interplay between the I-90 and N-400 application fees. As explained above, N-400 fee increases in 2004 and 2007 resulted in declines in naturalization applications. By contrast, in November of 2010, USCIS increased the fee on the I-90 but left the N-400 price unchanged. Following that I-90 fee increase, citizenship application rebounded to the rates they had been in 2006, suggesting price sensitivity to the differential.

24. Following the statement that demand for immigration services is inelastic, the Final Rule states, “DHS also does not believe that the NPRM is in any way discriminatory in its application and effect.” 85 Fed. Reg. 46896. The Final Rule provides no data or evidence in support of this belief.

25. Contrary to the Final Rule’s assertion, analysis of data indicates that fee increases can have a significant impact on the composition of who naturalizes. Our research shows that fee increases resulted in a dramatic and disproportionate decline in naturalization by less-educated (and likely lower income) immigrants and immigrants who were born in Mexico.

1 26. In particular, using American Community Survey (“ACS”) data from the Public Use
2 Microdata Sample (“PUMS”), we analyzed three aspects of those naturalizing: their educational 3 level, their length of time in the country prior to naturalization, and their national origin. We used 4 education because it is a characteristic that is highly correlated with income but less mutable. Our 5 analysis showed a dramatic decline in naturalization in those with less than a high school education
6 following fee increases in 1999 and 2007. Our analysis also demonstrated that as the price 7 differential rises between green card renewal and naturalization, there are generally longer delays 8 between arrival in the country and naturalization. Finally, the data showed that naturalizations by 9 Mexicans dropped dramatically after the 1999 fee increase, rose in 2007 just before the fee increases 10 that year, and then fell again. Considering all factors, price sensitivity seems to be a factor causing 11 this decline in naturalizations by Mexicans.

12 27. The Final Rule states: “DHS recognizes that filing fees are a burden for some people 13 of limited financial means. However, as previously stated, the cost of fee waivers and reduced fees 14 are borne by all other fee payers, because they must be transferred to those who pay a full fee to 15 ensure full cost recovery. DHS believes that it is more equitable to base fees on the beneficiary-pays 16 principle. Thus, USCIS takes a relatively careful position with respect to transferring costs from one 17 applicant to another through the expansion of fee waiver eligibility and discounting fees. To set fees 18 at various levels based on income, as suggested by the commenter, would require deviation from the 19 underlying fee-setting methodology and require some of the costs for those applications to be 20 reassigned to other benefit requests. Therefore, DHS did not incorporate a reduced fee, sliding scale, 21 or family cap in this final rule or the other suggestions provided by commenters.” 85 Fed. Reg.
22 46827.

23 28. The result of the Final Rule is not equitable. Charging the same fee for the N-400 24 naturalization application without making a fee waiver generally available will mean that some 25 otherwise eligible permanent residents will be unable to apply for naturalization.

26 29. The Final Rule makes no attempt to explain how it is “equitable” to fail to take into 27 account ability-to-pay in setting fees. A permanent resident in California with a household income of 28 $32,751 for a family of four had been eligible for a fee waiver for the N-400 application. Because

1 that income is now $1 over 125% of the federal poverty guidelines, that applicant would not be 2 eligible for a fee waiver under the Final Rule, if one was even available to him or her. That 3 permanent resident would now need to pay $1,170 to apply. A permanent resident in California with 4 a household income of $1 million for a family of one would pay the same N-400 fee of $1,170. The 5 burden of the $1,170 fee is obviously quite different on these permanent residents. An equitable 6 approach should take into account the difference in relative burden.

7 30. Contrary to the assertion that the Final Rule is equitable, the Final Rule will increase 8 inequity. The Final Rule will negatively and disproportionately affect poor, non-white immigrants 9 and create a significant obstacle to their ability to access the economic and social benefits of 10 citizenship.

11 31. By increasing inequity, the Final Rule harms the economy generally. My own 12 research with Chris Benner in our book, Equity, Growth, and Community, demonstrates that large 13 disparities are a drag on the ability of regions to maintain employment growth, a result that squares 14 with similar work on employment, output, per capita income, and productivity by researchers at the 15 Cleveland Federal Reserve for the Fund for Our Economic Future.

1 I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing 2 is true and correct to the best of my knowledge.
